

The AIM Program and the Frequency of Autism

by Barbara Stahura

As neurological disorders go, Autism is one of the most complicated and baffling. Its severity covers a wide spectrum. Some people with Autism show few signs and can even attend college; others may throw frequent tantrums, or may never utter an intelligible word. What's worse for families, is that no one in the medical community can yet say with any accuracy what causes "Autism Spectrum Disorders." Childhood vaccines have been suspected, as have genetics, environmental factors such as pesticides and processed food, and antibodies in the mother's womb. But one thing is certain: 1 in 150 children in the US now has Autism. According to the Centers for Disease Control, a number ten times higher than just a decade ago.

Stephen Lewis, founder of EMC², created The AIM Program of Energetic Balancing after an extensive study of the intersection of quantum physics and spirituality.

Essentially, The AIM Program locates an unbalanced energy frequency in someone's consciousness and sets it right by delivering the corrected frequency around the clock. Think of searching through the frequencies on a radio when you're in between stations, all you get is static, but land on the right frequency, and the station comes through with clarity. So far, Stephen has identified thousands, and is adding more all the time.

Several years ago, Dr. Wayne Dyer, internationally known speaker, asked his friend Stephen to check a little girl with Autism to see if The AIM Program might help her. When Stephen enrolled her in AIM and checked her, he found two frequencies then unknown in the program's database, so he added them, naming them after this first person in which he had found them, as is his custom. A few months later, the girl's mother called to say her daughter was no longer Autistic. Stephen was thrilled that the girl had healed herself with AIM. Then the parents of other children with Autism enrolled in the program also began contacting him to offer their gratitude, saying their children had improved, too, in various ways. Stephen began offering AIM scholarships to people with the frequency of Autism. To date, hundreds of people with Autism have received these scholarships.

John's daughter, Claire, is in her 30s. Her Autism was so severe that she had never progressed beyond the developmental level of a young adolescent. Several years after enrolling in AIM, she is attending junior college and taking remedial classes and has a part-time job. Her father reports that her self-esteem has greatly improved, along with her abilities to solve problems. For more information on The AIM Scholarship Program visit www.aimprogram.com.
